

I am opposed to the FCC proposal to roll back Net Neutrality rules. I rely on my personal internet service for my livelihood, and our business uses online services that are in direct competition with services offered by our ISP. With changes to the existing protection rules, we may be financially compelled by our local ISP—with whom there are no competitors—to use their services, despite the detriment to our business.

David Brusstar